The Old Reliable Jewelry House.

of Hopkinsville is, after all, the best place to get anything in the Jewelry line. There's a record behind us, a record of over thirty years; a clean record of satisfied customers, a record of honest dealing, for honest quality, honest prices. It's a record any Jeweler might feel proud of. And when we sell an article we have in mind that we have a record to maintain, and no slipshod methods, no careless workmanship, no lack of quality, is ever allowed to mar the record of the past. But to improve, if possible, this record, is ever our aim, and goods are sold for as low a price as it is possible to sell reliable goods.

It will pay you in the end to deal with the Old Reliable Jeweler.

BERRY ON TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Arrested as Sequel to Coroner's Verdict Tuesday.

BROTHER PROSECUTES.

His Little Daughter is One of the Chief Witnesses Against Him.

Winfield W. Berry, whose wife died a week ago, was arrested by Coroner Allensworth Saturday, following the verdict of the coroner's jury that the woman's body showed signs of violence. He was charged with striking her in the stomach with an iron pan. When struck she screamed and ran outside the house, where she fell unconscious and was taken in by the neighbors and died without regaining consciousness.
Evidence showed that she had given birth to a child only a few days ago.
A woman near her home has taken charge of the infant, a girl.

Berry denies his guilt. His six-year-old son is a witness and several neighbors heard the woman's screams.

The case was called yesterday and is now on trial. Mrs. Berry's brother, John Helsley, of Gilbertsville, is here to aid in the prosecution. He has employed John Feland to assist County Attorney Duffy. Judge W.
T. Fowler has been appointed to defend Berry, who is without means.
Steps have been taken to get his children committed to the Orphans' Home.

DEATH OF MRS. COX.

After an Illness of Six Weeks Passed Away Saturday Morning.

Mrs. Bettie Boulware Cox, wife of Mr. A. S. Cox, died at 2 o'clock Sunday morning after an illness of six weeks. The cause of her death was flux.

Mrs. Cox was a noble Christian woman, having been a devoted member of the Christian church from early girlhood. Aside from home duties nothing claimed more of her attention than doing good to others, and ministering to the wants of those whom she knew needed her aid in any way. Of a kind and sympathetic nature, she always found time to inquire where she could be of most service, and entered into her work of usefulness with a love that is born of a desire to follow the commands of the Savior. Nothing she possessed was too good for others, and those with whom she mingled in this life were uplifted and made happy by her quiet and unassuming ways. But few women of her age had more friends, and her death is generally mourned.

She was married to Mr. Cox in 1865, and three children were the fruit of their union, two of them dying in infancy. She is survived by her husband and little son, aged two and a half years. Mrs. Cox was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
R. L. Boulware. Mr. Boulware has been invalid for several months.
Mrs. Boulware has but recently recovered from a severe illness, but in all the afflictions of the family, faithful friends and the family physician have been unremitting in their attention.

Mrs. Cox's four brothers, Messrs.
Logan and Philip, of Paducah; Alec, of Huntsville, Ala., and Benjamin, of St. Louis, came home to attend the funeral services.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. D. Smith, and Dr. J. E. Forgatch at the church Sunday afternoon and the remains laid to rest in the Hopkinsville cemtery. The floral tributes were beautiful and numerous.

Tobacco worms are said to be more plentiful than for years and Paris green is in great demand.

DR. MEDER GOES TO LEXINGTON.

Third Assistant Physician at Western Asylum Transferred.

A POPULAR OFFICIAL.

She Leaves Here After Six Years of Most Successful Experience.

Probably the most prominent lady physician in Kentucky is Dr. Florence Meder, who left the Western Kentucky Asylum this week to accept a transfer to the Eastern Asylum at Lexington. Dr. Meder left Sunday for New York with a party of Louisville friends and will spend a vacation of two or three weeks in New York, Boston and Atlantic City and return in time to enter upon her duties at Lexington.

Dr. Meder is a native of Louisville and received her medical education in one of the colleges of that city.
She graduated in 1898 and at once began the practice of medicine. In 1900, after two years of practice, she was appointed third assistant physician at the Western Asylum by Gov.
Beckham. But little more than a girl, she entered upon her difficult duties in a way that soon convinced the head of the institution that she was not only a young woman of a high order of intelligence, but a physician abundantly able to hold her own with the sterner sex. She soon familiarized herself with her duties and as time passed endeared herself to every one of the 450 female patients on her wards. A graduate of the Homoeopathic school she took up the study of the Alo-pathic school and is now thoroughly posted in the science and practice of both schools.

In the six years that Miss Meder has been here, it has been her fortune to serve with four superintendents and as many different assistant physicians, but through all these changes that have occurred from time to time, she has performed her duties so faithfully, so discreetly and with so little concern for the differences of others, that she has retained the good opinion of each succeeding superintendent and all are willing to testify that she has made a model and exceptional official.

She is a physician in the true sense of the word. A hard student, a close observer and ready in every emergency, she possesses all the strength of purpose of a man with all the tenderness and gentleness of a woman in her treatment of the unfortunate women she has so lovingly looked after.

Dr. Meder is not only recognized as an able physician, but she is a social favorite and will leave many warm friends among the people of Hopkinsville who will follow her with their best wishes for continued success in her new career. She will be succeeded by Dr. (Mrs.) Minnie C.
Dunlap, who will arrive from the Lexington Asylum September 1st.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

After having served as coach of the Cornell University crew for a quarter of a century Charles E. Courtney has announced his intention of severing his connection with the institution. Friction with the graduate management, unsatisfactory salary and repeated annoyances to which he has been subjected by the athletic

C. E. COURTNEY, association are among the reasons given for the break, between the "old man" and the authorities. Resident alumni and university officials, protesting against the impending loss of the veteran coach, are bringing all possible influences to bear to induce Courtney to alter his announced determination. His contract still has three years to run, and the friends of the Ithaca school object to his release. Influences tending to widen the breach between the coach and the athletic management have been developing for some time. Of all the athletic coaches at Cornell Courtney is said to have received the lowest salary—$2,000. As he is but 56 years of age, he feels that he is far from his last days of usefulness. Friends of the coach say that he has had numerous offers of increased salary from other institutions, but he has steadfastly rejected them, declaring that his place was with Cornell. John L. Senior, graduate manager, is held directly responsible for Courtney's decision to ask to be relieved of his contract. Frequent arguments over the management of the crew are said to have resulted in settlement unfavorable and unjust to the coach. The governing board of the athletic association is charged with ingratitude in connection with the naval appropriations. Formal action on Courtney's request for release cannot be taken until October, when the athletic council, with whom full authority rests, holds its next regular meeting. Cornell's success on the water in the past has been due entirely to Courtney. According to those who know him, Courtney is no angel to get along with. He never minces words. A failure to do one's duty is an unpardonable sin in his eyes. He has taken men out of the boat and crew on mere suspicion of dereliction in duty. His anger is the equal of a Chinese typhoon. But he is always fair.

Jack Moakley is to the athletic field of Cornell what Courtney has been to the crewing branch of the university. He is an old-timer at track athletics, and not only had a wide reputation as a track athlete himself in New England, but also as a track coach and trainer. He is perhaps the youngest of the old set of track athletes from New England who now are coaching college athletes on the cinder path, and from his work with the Cornell track and cross-country teams he has rightfully earned the title of the foremost trainer of track men in the country. Before going to Cornell, Moakley used to coach school-boys in Boston, the athletes of the Boston Athletic association and of several other athletic clubs. While there he brought out the wonderful quarter-miler, Tommy Burke, whose red shock of hair crossed the line in a quarter-mile one day, when being trained by Moakley, a foot or so ahead of Muxey Lane in 48 seconds flat. The race was a match between the pair, and was run on a clay horse track and in a driving rainstorm, with the mud three inches deep and a strong wind in the runner's faces. Many prominent sporting men who saw this race called it the fastest quarter-mile they ever witnessed, for at the finish each man's feet weighed four or five pounds with the cinder mud. The training of Burke was one of Moakley's earliest achievements. Burke also won the quarter hands down in the big international meet in New York on Hackley Oval in 1895. Moakley went to Cornell in 1899, and started in to work for the end that he succeeded in achieving for the first time in 1903—the winning of the intercollegiate track meet. Moakley had a harder proposition than perhaps any other coach in the country. He went to a big university where track athletics did not exist even in name, and he had to not only train the bare handful of men who came out voluntarily, but he also had to hustle about the university to get out enough men to make some sort of a competition for the men he wanted to bring out. There was no interest taken in the sport, and it was not until a stimulus was given that the all-absorbing topic. Moakley started in at the bottom of the scale, and with his usual sagacity he took up the branch he could do most keenly. It would be possible to attract more attention to the other branches of track work.

HIS GOOD WORK

Should Keep Dr. Nash In Kentucky, Says the Argus.

The Baptist Argus has this complimentary reference to Rev. C. H. Nash, who has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist church:

"Dr. Nash has served most faithfully and efficiently at Hopkinsville, Ky., for sixteen years. During that time the church has erected a $40,000 stone building and greatly increased its mission gifts. Only a Mask.

Many are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little, if any, stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not rest nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfect digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subverted by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the whole system."

Dead At 81.

James Crabtree, one of the oldest and wealthiest citizens of the northern part of the county died Friday. Mr. Crabtree was a native of Hopkinsville, but had been living in Christian for a number of years. He was in his 81st year. He erected several years ago his own monument at St. Charles. The remains were buried there Saturday. For two years or more he had been an invalid and his death was not unexpected. His wife and two sons survive him.

TRIGG TEST CASE

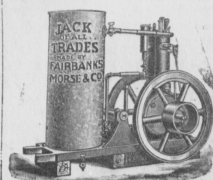

Is Attracting Much Attention Throughout Tobacco District.

Another suit that is of much importance and interest not only to the citizens of Trigg county, but to everyone throughout the entire Dark Tobacco District, has been filed in the Trigg Circuit Court, says the Record. It is The Dark Tobacco District Planters' Protective Association of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, plaintiffs, against Geo. E. Ladd, E. L. Ladd and E. M. Flack and Frank Dabney, under the firm name of Flack & Dabney, defendants, and is for the sum of $2,050.00. The suit grows out of the fact that last March Geo. E. and E. L. Ladd sold their 1905 crop of tobacco, which they had previously pledged to the association, to Messrs. Flack & Dabney, at Hopkinsville.

Tobacco vs. Poultry.

RECENT number of the Connecticut Farmer contains the following editorial item, which is of value as indicating how prominent an industry may become, even though but comparatively few farmers are interested in it. Presumably but a very small per cent of the farmers of the State of Connecticut are growers of tobacco, and but an insignificant proportion of the total acreage of the State is land adapted to that crop, and yet it is put prominently forward as an important industry for the Board of Agriculture to encourage. The clipping says:

"We are glad the State Board of Agriculture managed to have the tobacco industry put prominently forward at its recent institute in East Hartford. It is the one great crop which means quick cash return, and yet the growers were persistent in slow to grasp the ideas for a bigger and better crop which Prof. Shamel, representing the national department of agriculture, has frequently presented. The farmers in Florida were not so slow. They applied the knowledge gathered by government experts with the result that they have produced a leaf that is more popular with manufacturers because of the larger number of wrappers that can be cut from it."

The special point to which we want to call attention is that tobacco "is the one great crop which always means quick cash return," and contrast it with egg production and poultry for market, which is a crop that means a continuous cash return. Tobacco, like many other farm crops, is a once-a-year crop, which is sold off to market for a lump sum, and there is no other income until the next year when another crop has been harvested; the cash all comes in at once, an it has to be divided up in portions to meet engagements accumulated in growing that particular crop, to pay running expenses till another crop year has come around—and woe be to the farmer who spends all of his tobacco money as soon as he receives it, without the thought that there is to be no more income until the next year's crop is harvested.

The poultry and egg farmer, on the contrary, has a small stream of income coming in all the year around, and that, as we apprehend it, is a much better condition than having the whole year's income coming in in a lump sum,—all at one time. With the poultry farmer there is a weekly income as well as a weekly outgo, and if he so manages his business that the outgo is within the income derived from the sale of the eggs and poultry, he is the most independent of farmers. It is true that this is almost a paraphrase of the celebrated philosophy of our genial friend, Wilkins Micawber, Esq., who puts it somewhat thusly: "If a man's income is twenty pounds and his expenditure is twenty pounds and sixpence, he is a poor miserable devil, and is in hot water all the time; if his expenditure is nineteen, nineteen and sixpence, he is as independent as a Lord and perfectly care-free."

This brings us naturally to the advantage of keeping accounts. Prof. Graham, of the Connecticut Agricultural College, spoke excellently upon this point at the annual meeting and collation of the Brocton, Mass., Poultry Association, when he asked the audience if they knew how much their eggs cost them a dozen. He said far too many poultry keepers never figure out how much it costs to keep their hens, and did not know whether the eggs they sell in the spring at twenty cents a dozen cost fifteen cents or twenty-five cents. If they cost twenty-five cents and they were selling at twenty cents, there was manifestly a loss on every dozen eggs sold.

If poultry keepers would keep an itemized account of all the money expended for foods, etc., and would credit the hens with all eggs laid and poultry sold or used, they would be surprised to learn that the poultry paid so well. A well-known poultry writer and lecturer said that if poultry keepers would keep a simple debit and credit account with their poultry they would come to a better understanding of the value of eggs and poultry produced, and would better appreciate the little daily returns their hens made us for our care of them.

A very simple account will do. On a common calendar mark down each day the number of eggs received that day, and at the end of the week put down on the right hand page of a simple account book the total for the week, and their money value at the going market prices also put down on that page the cash value of any fowls or chickens sold or eaten. On the opposite page charge the fowls with all the foods and supplies bought for them, and at the end of the year foot up the two accounts and strike a balance. You will be surprised to learn that the little busy hen has paid so goodly a return, and will realize the far greater advantage it is to have that return coming in regularly, week by week, instead of in one big lump sum at the end of the year, as is the case with our tobacco growing friends.

The Hen versus the Cow.

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of an individual hen and her cost of maintenance for a year we find that in proportion to her value and cost she far exceeds the returns given by a cow. Fifty good laying pullets are worth no more than a good grade dairy cow—considering their utility only, and estimating from the comparison their value for exhibition or fancy breeding purposes. Fifty good utility pullets, if given good common sense management, will yield a profit for a year, over and above their feed, of seventy-five dollars—one dollar and a half per hen per year. If the same flock of hens are given scientific treatment the income may be greatly increased. I think it is safe to say that there are few cows in the State of Connecticut, which when their feed is paid for, returns a net profit of seventy-five dollars a year to her owner. In short, I am almost tempted to challenge your presiding officer, who is the President of the Dairyman's Association, to show me one utility cow in the State that is doing as much for her owner. I make this comparison not for the purpose of disparaging the dairy interests of the State, but to emphasize the possibility of the hen as a staple farm product. More especially should it be emphasized in those cases of sterilized farms where even the soil is too poor for even ordinary grazing. It is safe to say that a large percentage of Connecticut farms have one or more acres unfit for even pasture. Such land is ideal land for poultry, provided it is dry. A field of rocks growing up to sprouts and briars is an ideal situation for poultry, and can be made to return a handsome profit to the owner.

CARE ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS.

It is not to be supposed, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry in the past has been that it has been neglected. The average farmer belittles the hen and considers her beneath his dignity—of no value, and fit only for the attention of the women folks. If the average farmer would keep a flock of from one to three hundred laying hens, and give them half the care he gives his cows and hogs, he would find the balance sheet at the end of the year in favor of the hen. There is a saying that "a hen will eat anything a hog will and make a good deal better use of it." If the farmers of this State would raise less pork and more fowl, feed more clean, wholesome grain to their hens, and less brewery refuse to their cows, we would find less farm mortgages begging for takers.—Connecticut Farmer.

Improving the Flock.

There are three practical ways to improve farm poultry. One is to buy a mating or two of well bred birds and use their eggs for hatching. This is an expeditious, comparatively inexpensive and satisfactory method. If it represents too much money for you, buy two or three sittings of eggs from some good, reputable breeder. Mark the chickens hatched and start next year's flock with these. This method is a little slower, but often times equally successful. The third and most inexpensive method is one which every farmer can practice if he will. It has been used time and again, and when common sense is exercised it is decidedly satisfactory. Simply cull out your flock every season, saving only the choicest birds of uniform color and quality. Exchange male birds regularly with someone who is raising the same kind of poultry. The results will surprise you.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Southwest

The Land of BIG CROPS and PROSPERITY.

Are you making as much off your farm as you ought? No doubt you are making all you CAN. The trouble is the land costs too much. It takes too much money to buy a big farm, and so you are trying to make a living on a small farm, or perhaps you are renting one and paying a good share of what you raise, in rent. Wouldn't it be better to go where the price of good land is so little that you can own a big farm—where every acre of the ground is working for you and all you raise is paying you good profits?

There are thousands of acres of fertile land in the Southwest along the line of the Cotton Belt Route that can be bought for from $3 to $10 an acre. This land is increasing in value each year.

See the Southwest at Small Cost.

A trip to the Southwest will convince you that our best interest lay in settling there. The trip can be made at very little expense. On the first and third Tuesdays of each month you can purchase a round trip ticket to any point in the Southwest or on via the Cotton Belt Route at very low rates. Stop-overs will be allowed for you to examine any locality you are interested in.
